Weaponing Conventional Weapon System Effectiveness

Historically in the U.S. military, Weaponing has been the purview of the Joint Technical Coordinating Group for Munitions Effectiveness - the JTCG/ME, whose charter is to be the sole U.S. DoD Agency for the standardization of methodologies and data allowing conventional weapon system performance to be evaluated and compared. The background to the formation and historical development of the JTCG/ME may be found by clicking the "JTCG/ME History" button on the left.

Weaponing: An Introduction, Third Edition, Volume 1 covers the basic subjects that need to be understood to compute weapon effects based on the concept of an Effectiveness Index (EI). These subjects include weapon delivery accuracy, warhead lethality and target vulnerability. This approach gives reasonable, rapid results and allows an easier understanding of current methods used to estimate weapon effects.

Weaponing: Conventional Weapon System Effectiveness, Second Edition provides an extensive analysis of the techniques used to predict the effect of air- and surface-launched conventional weapons directed against ground targets. These methods are found typically in Joint Munitions Effectiveness Manuals (JMEM) and associated weaponing tools such as the JMEM Weaponing System.

To evaluate the suitability of the Weaponing tool for the Surface to Surface Guided Missile at the AboveGround Buildings, we analyzed the relation among SSPD, CEP and the number of missiles, expected damage etc.. According to the analysis, if the target Length is 100m, and is longer than the target length, the tool is suitable but shorter than it, the tool is not suitable.

Combat Weapon Effectiveness Data. a weapon system. Weapons are not operated by laboratory experts methodically following test plans, but by aircrews acting under combat tensions and pressure. Data used in predicting weapon effectiveness must be a valid representation of how both human and machines perform in combat. Very little of this weapons. The program allows users to compute the effectiveness of their weapons based on the initial release/firing condition for both AS and SS weapons. The effectiveness is determined by predicting the probability of success of damaging or incapacitating the target. The program also allows the calculation of the trajectory of unguided AS weapons
